"Unless there is other outside intervention, the United States' role would be to confine itself to what it has been," Mr. Kissinger said. He declared that U. S. policy is to avoid conflict and, if war breaks out, to bring its influence to bear to end it as early as possible.

Mr. Kissinger said that extending the life of the United Nations emergency force separating Israeli and Syrian forces on the Golan Heights was important to peace in the Middle East. He added, however, that informal statements from Syria raised "grave doubts" that Damascus would agree to extending the mandate of the UN force.

The secretary of state added that he sees no prospects for negotiations between Israel and Jordan now that Jordan's King Husseln has accepted the decision of the Arab summit conference in Rabat earlier this month (Continued on Page 2, Col. 7)

UN Restricts Israel's Rights To Speak on Palestine Issue

By Marilyn Berger

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Nov. 15.-The General Assembly voted yesterday to deny Israel the right to speak again in the debate nn Palestine except for brief periods at the end of each day in exercising a right of reply.

The vote of 75 to 23 with 18 abstentions, suddenly pushed through late in the afternoon, eifectively makes the UN rostrum into a platform for the Pales-

It was the third vote in less than a month that demonstrated the power of the Asian-African majority to impose its will on the assembly. First, on Oct. 14, it overwhelmingly voted to hear the Palestine Liberation Organization speak, the first time the rostrum was to be given to a representative of anything but a duly constituted government. Then, on Tuesday, it voted to suspend South Africa from the General Assembly because of its racial Yesterday it deprived Israel of much of its volce here.

The United States spoke against limiting Israel's right to speak and was joined in opposition during the vote by most of the countries of Western Europe and some from South America. Spain and Japan, both of which are concerned about maintaining good relations with the Arabs, abstained, while Portugal broke with its Western neighbors and voted with the Asian-African majority. Portugal has been moving toward the political left since the coup last April which overthrew a 48year-old rightist dictatorship.

"What this means," an Israeli spokesman said of the assembly vote, "is that every minority country without a bloc is denied the right to speech required for the fair exposition of its posi-

The spokesman, Υaakov Morris, said: "What you have just ritnessed has been a completely staged performance replete with prepared speeches by Senegal and Iraq." These countries spoke in favor of limiting delegations to one speech during the debate.

The assembly vote applies to all delegations, but affects Israel more than any of the others. Israeli Ambassador Yosef Tekoah told reporters that while Syria was also inscribed to speak every day, as was Israel. Syria can he represented by 19 other Arab states. Israel stands alone in espousing its cause in Palestine debate.

Assembly President Abdelaziz Bouteflike of Algeria called for the vote following a day of he-hind-the-scenes jockeying.

Mr. Tekoah called a press conference to announce that he had been told Israel would not be permitted to speak, Indeed, when the UN spokesman yesterday an-nounced the list of speakers, Israel was not on it although it had been listed to speak each day. Omitted by Mistake

The Israelis said that this had all been orchestrated, leading up to Mr. Bouteflika's call for a vote. # UN Hunts for Mideast Moderation

By Paul Hofmann

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., NOV. 15 (NYT) .- With Yassir Arafat gone, the emitement at UN headquarters has abated.

In the lobbies here and in diplomatic offices on Manhattan's East Side, meanwhile, the professionals are trying to penetrate behind the histrionics of the cur-rent General Assembly debate on Palestine and analyze—the substance.

At the same time, representa-tives of the Palestine Liberation Organization and delegates from Areb countries are seeking to line up as large a majority as pos-sible for a still unwritten resolu-tion to be voted on at the end of the debate.

"The intention is to steamroll us." an Israeli said. He ebserved that the positions, as presented by PLO leader Aralat and Amfor Yosef Tekoah of Israel, "have undoubtedly hardened."

Many other delegates say that the mutual denunciations in the assembly debate indicated widened gap between Israel and the Arabs, and sounded like a shrill preinde to a lifth Middle

A senior delegate from a Euro-pean country who has long served in the Middle East remarked: "Arafat had to talk the way he did because the PLO has its uncompromising charter and ideol-ogy, and he has to put up a show for the Arab public."

However, he went on, the mainstream of Argh thinking is not as hostile to compromise as Mr. Arafet's words might have indicated. "Listen to the Jordanians, listen to the Lebanese, the delegate said: "You'll find notes of moderation."

The source cannot be identified. In this fluid phase of UN activities, almost every diplomat talking to-a reporter ritualistically prefaces his remarks, "Our conversation is, of course, completely

Various Postures

The delegate, who professed to see various postures—from ex-tremist to moderate—and room for maneuver in the Arab camp, sair he sensed some flexibility also behind the uncompromising stand that Israel has taken in the Palestine debate.

"Israel's delegate rejects may dealings with the PLO because he has to reckon with a hardline constituency at home and bard-line corrents in American the European suggested. "The real mood in the Israeli leadership may be somewhat less rigid." The analysts of major diplomatic missions are subjecting. Mr. Arafat's assembly address to exegesis as if it had come straight out of the Dead Sea Scrolls.

Prompting New Court Study of Tape

Haldeman Reasserts Probe Imperiled CIA

WASHINGTON, NOT. 15 (AP). -U.S. District Court Judge Sirica today ordered a replaying of the June 23, 1972, tape on which Richard Nixon, then president, and side H. R. Haldeman discassed trying to use the Central Intelligence Agency to limit the FBI investigation of the Watergate break-in.

Judge Sirica ordered the tape played again, with the jury ab-sent, after Mr. Haldeman's lawyers in the Watergate cover-up trial contended that Mr. Halde man had reason to believe that the FBI might compromise covert CIA activity in Mexico.

It was during the conversation on June 23 that Mr. Haldeman told Mr. Nixon that the Watergate investigation was back in the problem area, because the PB1 is not under control." Mr. Haldeman noted that one of the FBI theories was that the CIA had been involved in the break-in- at Democratic National Committee headquarters six days earlier. He suggested that the CIA be used to try to get the PRI to limit its probe.

For the Country' Near the end of the conversation Mr. Nixon said, They [tha CIA] should call the FHI in and say that we wish for the country. don't go any further into this case, period." The prosecution has contended that the real reason for trying to limit the FBI investigation was an effort to prevent tracing campaign , funds channeled through a Mexican bank that eventually were used to finance the break-in. Lt. Gen. Vernon Walters, depnty director of the CIA, was being cross-examined by Mr. Haldeman's attorneys when the CIA issue was raised. Assistant prosecutor James Neal objected to questions being asked by Mr. Haldeman's attorney, Frank Strickler. Judge Sirica asked Mr. Strickler where his questioning was leading, and Mr. Strickler replied that Gen. Walters had testified earlier that there was no CIA involvement in the Watergate bugging. "In fact, the CIA did have assets south of the border which could have been compromised." Mr. Strickler said. "Is Mr. Strickler prepared to offer proof that defendant Haldeman knew of CIA assets south of the border that could be compromised?" Mr. Nesi saked Judge Sirica then ordered the jury out of the room, and Mr.

pointed out that if Mr. Haldeman's attorneys could not offer such proof, they had no right to cross-examine Gen. Walters in that area.

"John Wilson, another Halde-man attorney, said his client "had a reasonable suspicion" and then added: "This is no shallow effort on our part."

Nixou and Doctors In another trial issue, Judge Sirica today ordered Mr. Nixon's lawyer to report back by Tuesday whether the former president will resist an independent medical inquiry by three court-appointed doctors. Judge Siries summoned Mr. Nixon's lawyer, Herbert Miller jr. to his courtroom after the doctors declined to go ahead with an examination in connection with the Watergate cover-up trial without advance clearance obtained from Mr. Nixon.

Judge Sirlca said he had spoken with Dr. Charles Hufnagel, chairman of the medical panel, and been told the physicians "won't go out there (to California, unless they have authorization."

WASHINGTON, NOV. 15 (AP), The man who proposed the 1970 campaign higgraphy critical of Arthur Goldberg said today that he was not aware until a few weeks ago that the book was financed with Rockefeller family money. John Wells, a long-time political associate of Vice-Presidentdesignate Nelson Rockefeller, also said that the book was intended to acquaint New York voters with Mr. Goldberg's record during the gubernatorial campaign, in which Mr. Rocke-feller defeated Mr. Goldberg.

He said that far from being derogatory or libelous, as Mr. Goldberg has charged, "there was nothing in it even unfair." Mr. Wells, who first suggested the biography to Mr. Rockefeller. told the Senate Rules Committee that he did not know that it was financed by Laurance Rockefeller, the governor's brother, until he read it in the newspapers a few weeks ago.

"Where did you think the funds were going to come from?" asked Sen Howard Cannon, D-

Well-Connected

"I didn't know," Mr. Wells replied. "I knew the Rockefellers Were reasonably well-connected and had a lot of friends around."

Financing of the book, through what Sen. Cannon called "a devious laundering scheme so the Rockefeller name would not be associated with it." has become a major issue in the Senate hearings on Mr. Rockefeller's nomination to the vice-presidency. Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va. said that the one-man corporation established by Mr. Wells to publish the book was a facade, but Mr. Wells insisted that it was a proper legal entity.

Mr. Wells said that the Goldberg book "was probably the worst idea I ever had." Laurance Rockefeller lost his investment and the book is said to have had no impact on the campaign.

Laurance Rockefeller testified later in the day that he financed the book as an investment and never discussed the matter with his brother. This is one investment I wish

I had not made because it has proved to be an embarrassment to my brother Nelson and Mr. Justice Goldberg, who happens to be someone I admire," Mr. Rockefeller told the committee.

Several other individuals connected with the publication of the book are still to be questioned by the committee, which had hoped to wind up its hearings today.

Meanwhile, Sen. Cannon, chairman of the committee, said be would not be stampeded by President Ford into hurrying congressional approval of the Rockefeller nomination. He said the examination by his committee of issues raised in the hearing cannot be rushed.

Considered Libelous

Mr. Goldberg testified yesterday that he considers the book libelous even under strict Supreme Court guidelines that no public figure can sue for libel unless he can also prove malice.

Mr. Goldberg refused to accept Mr. Rockefeller's apology for his

U.S. Tells States To Drop Fight On Offshore Oil

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15 (NYT).

The Ford administration indicated to the nation's coastal states yesterday that it was go-ing nhead with its plans for sharply increased offshore oil drilling no matter how they felt about it. Some governors and other top officials from Maine to Alaska, invited nere by the President to seek their cooperation in shaping the new drilling plans, came away from two days of meetings with the feeling that the decisions al-ready had been made.

"We were invited down here to have input," said Maine's Gov.-elect James Longley as he left briefing session at the Interior Department's auditorium, instead we were told." Administration officials said that while they bad drawn up tentative plans to lease offshore land to private oil companies, they still were seeking the counsel of the states affected.

Film Star Johnny Mack Brown, 70

WOODLAND HILLS, Calif., Nov. 15 (UPI).—Johnny Mack Brown, 70, a star in Western films and an All-American football player at the University of Alabama in the 1920s, died at a hospital here yesterday. He had been suffering from a kidney problem for four months.

Mr. Brown had an outstanding career as a halfback for the Crimson Tide. As a senior, in the 1926 Rose Bowl game, he caught touchdown passes of 81 and 30 yards and Alabama defeated the University of Washington, 20-19. The following year, Mr. Brown was an assistant coach and returned to the Rose Bowl with the Alabama football team. He contacted actor George Fawcett, who suggested he try motion

Mr. Brown started his film career with a leading role in the 1928 drawing-room comedy, "Our Dancing Daughters."

But his handsome, rugged appearance led him to Western films. He had starring roles in productions with Greta Garbo. Jackie Coogan, Norma Shearer, Joan Crawford, Mae West and others. He co-starred with Mary Pickford in "Coquette," in which she won an Academy Award. He made a Western epic, "Billy the Kid," and later did a series of Westerns, including "Range Justice," "Western Renegades," and "West of El Dorado." Mr. Brown married his college sweetheart, Constance Foster, and they had four children. In 1961, after some guest apand "Wells Fargo" television shows, Mr. Brown became a host at a Beverly Hills restaurant.

Even After Investment Pace Slackens

Hawaiians Still Resent Japan's Money Invasior

HONOLULU, Nov. 15 (AP).--The pace of Japanese investments in Hawaii is subsiding but the controversy and the ill-feeling over the economic invasion re-

About 20 major ventures by Japanese firms were recorded here in 1973, but less than a halfdozen have been reported so far

One of those was the highly publicized sale of three more resort hotels to Japanese finance Kenji Osano. These sales alone have caused more criticism than all of the previous Japanese forays into the Hawaiian business

"What the Japanese couldn't do with bombs in World War II, they are doing now with money." said a local tour-company em-ployee, expressing a view held by many residents.

$450 Million Invested Japanese investments total about $450 million and account for more than half the foreign investments in the state.

Japan's inflation and a deficit in its balance of payments are seen as the reasons for the tapering off of investments. But these problems did not stop Mr. Osano from buying the Sheraton-Walkiki, Royal Hawaiian and Sheraton-

Maui Hotels from Sheraton-TTT Corp. for a reported $105 million. The acquisition gave Mr. Osano control of 4,500 hotel rooms in Hawaii, and almost a fourth of those in Walkiki. It also established him as the top foreign property-owner in the resort.

Mr. Osano earlier bought two other Walkiki hotels, also from Sheraton. Sheraton will continue to operate the hotels under a long-term contract with Mr. Osano.

The Japanese financier owns 30 hotels in his own country, all outside Tokyo. He also is the seventh-largest stockholder and one of the managing directors of Tokyo's prestigious Imperial Hotel. Mr. Osano owns the Kokusai Kogyo Co., parent firm of 42 companies under his control. He is a close associate of Premier Kaknei Tanaka.

British at Odds on Publication Of Memoirs of Late Minister

By Bernard D. Nossiter

LONDON, Nov. 15 (WP).-All the Guardian asked, "Who's through his six years in Labor cabinets here, the late Richard Crossman kept a detailed record of what was going on.

A skilled journalist and professional historian, Mr. Crossman wanted his diaries to lay bare the inner workings of govern-ment and end what he once called "the noble lie at the heart of British politics."

Those who have seen Mr. Crossman's text say it is packed with revelations the most inti-mate account of how decisions are reached since the diaries of Samuel Pepys. Six months after Mr. Crossman's death, his diaries are still unpublished. They have become the center of a struggle over the public's right to know. Custom here dictates that officials' memoirs are submitted for approval to the Cabinet Office. This is a small and elite band of civil servants who serve as the cabinet secretariat from one administration to the next. Since June, Mr. Crossman's literary executors have been trying to get permission to pub-lish from Sir John Hunt, the cabinet secretary, but, so far, he ### has refused. Intransigent Veto'

This week Anthony Howard, successor to Mr. Crossman as editor of the weekly New Statesman, charged that Sir John had imposed "a totally intransigent veto." The failure to overrule him amounted to a "cynical betrayal" of the Labor party's pledge of open government, Mr. Howard contended.

Today Prime Minister Harold. Wilson answered the complaints: Mr. Crossman's diary has not been cleared, he told the Commons, because it gives "detailedaccounts" of cabinet meetings and "of advice given in confi-dence by individual civil servants and others in the belief that their confidence would be pro-

Continuing Dispute.

Mr. Wilson's explanation is not likely to end the dispute. How specific Sir John's objections are is etili unclear. Also unclear is whether a civil servant can judge impartially material that might embarrass other civil servants. In an editorial this morning,

Solzhenitsyn Joins 6 Authors In a New Dissident Anthology

By Christopher S. Wren

MOSCOW, Nov. 15 (NYT) .--Exiled author Alexander Sol-zhenitsyn has joined a baifdozen dissident littellectuals within the Soviet Union io plans to publish an anthology of critical essays on aspects of Russian life, a prominent dissident here disclosed yesterday.

Igor Shafarevich, a mathematics lecturer at Moscow University, with ties to both Mr. Solzhenitsyn and dissident physicist Andrei Sakharov, said that the anthology, "Out From Uoder the Boulders," rould come out first in a Russian-language edition in Paris, hopefully by the eod of this month.

The collection of unpublished essays was conceived by Mr. Solzhenitsyn nearly three years ago, hut was delayed by his arrest and expulsion last February, Mr. Shafarevich told a group of We-tern newsmen at his apart-

Mr. Shafarevich said that the anthology would examine "the problems of social and spiritual life in our country" and described the book as an attempt to show that dissidents could work for change within the Soviet

However, its publication is quite likely to incur the wrath of Soviet authorities, with unknown consequences for the six Identify themselves in print with Mr. Solzhenitsyn.

Great Wealth and Public Office

hearings and the commentary on the nomination of Nelson A. Rockefeller to be vicepresident is the proposition that the joining of national political power with the economic power of the Rockefeller family would be bad for the country. This proposition has been spelled out both abstractly and precisely. In its abstract form, and stripped of unnecessary rhetoric, it becomes an argument that the very rich should not be allowed to hold high political office because they bring with them a distorted view of American life. More precisely, the question becomes, as Sen. Cannon has put it, whether Mr. Rockefeller realizes the inherent risks of "the wedding of great economic and political power." In either form, it seems to us there is a mischievoue line of inquiry to the extent that it directs attention away from the real questions and diverts it toward a classical Marxist analysis of American politics in which, by definition, the holders of great wealth are, however enlightened individually, unavoidably corrupt agents of their class.

It is true, no doubt, that in some cases the holders of great wealth may not be fit to hold high public office. Their view of America may be so distorted and so narrowminded as to make them blind to the issues the nonwealthy in the country face. Similarly, some of the poor in the country may be unfit for high public office hecause their economic status has distorted their vision in a different but equally disqualifying way. And the same can he said of any general class of persons-males, females, white, black. rich, poor, bankers, lawyers, soldiers and so on. There were those who felt Gen. Eisenhower should not have been president hecause he possessed a "military mind," and those who distrusted Woodrow Wilson because he was a professor, and those who would have ruled out Lyndon Johnson because he was a Texan. The point is simply that it is the character and qualifications of the individual that matter most and these are not criteria that can fairly be applied on the basis of race or sex or social and economic background, or professional experience. or regional origin.

Fortunately, Mr. Rockefeller chose to deal directly with the issue of his wealth in his opening statement before the Senate Rules Committee on Wednesday. It now seems very clear to us that he understands the risks of which Sen, Cannon spoke and the arguments made on this issue, both precisely and abstractly, and he may understand them far better than most of his critics or ques-

The real questions about wealth and economic power as they relate to the vice-presidency (and the presidency) which Congress

One of the threads running through the should be attempting to answer were spoken by Mr. Rockefeller himself: "Am I the kind of man who would use his wealth improperly in public office? Or, more generally and more importantly, would my family background somehow limit and blind me, so that I would not be able to see and serve the general good of all Americans?"

> The answers to those questions, we believe, can only be found in Mr. Rockefeller'e record. And despite all the insinuations and all the details that have been dredged up in the last three months, there is not yet one substantial blt of evidence that suggests he has used his wealth improperly or that he has been unable to see the problems of the average American. Indeed, all the evidence surfaced so far points in just the other direction. What was the purpose of the loans and gifts he made to various public officials in New York State? His testimony is that his purpose was to make it possible for the state to have the services of men it might not otherwise have been able to attract, and nothing has been produced to contradict his version. That may not be a desirable way to run a state government—and in our view it is not-but it is neither unique in American history nor on its face an improper use of wealth. It may be worth recalling that in World War II it was patriotic for others to supplement the salaries of some of those who worked for the federal government for a dollar a year.

As to Mr. Rockefeller's second question, which has to do with the proposition that the rich should not be in high political office, there is no doubt from his record as governor of New York and as a national political candidate that he is sensitive to the needs of ordinary citizens. Few governors have been as quick to respond in a constructive and creative way to public needs as he was in his 15 years in Albany.

We do not know in what direction the Senate Rules Committee intends to proceed with all the witnesses it still plans to hear. Nor do we know what surprises the House Judiciary Committee has in store. But we do know that the continuing rounds of questions about the details of various gifts and loans and about the ohviously misguided decision to publish a book on Arthur Goldberg have prodoced little new and nothing that, in our view, is disqualifying. We also know that the country has been without a vice-president for three months now. At. some point in this protracted inquiry-and that point is fast approaching-it will become appropriate to ask whether some part of the purpose of the exercise now going on is not to cripple Mr. Rocketeller as a future political candidate rather than to investigate his qualifications to be vice-president.

THE WASHINGTON POST.

Cuba and the U.S.

Clearly Washington, if it had wished, could have opened the way to readmitting Cuba to the OAS by casting a vote in favor instead of abstaining. Many Latin Americans find it hard to understand that an American president can visit Peking or seek a consensus with Moscow, yet normalization with Cuba seems impossible. And indeed there does seem to be a common benefit deriving from breaking the Caribbean ice. Cuba could be a receptive market for the United States: there are plenty of people interested in Cuban sugar. Castro is showing signs of wanting to diversify his industries, and the United States would be the best partner in modernizing Cuban sugar produc-

The American abstention at Quito was probably well-intentioned, but in the long run it could harm Washington. The vote will not convince American opponents, and the others will be increasingly encouraged to pursne an independent policy.

World Food Conference

Efforts to banish hunger throughout the world at the unique UN World Conference on Food in Rome are being sabotaged by a depressingly large number of the 130 countries present, who eeem more interested in turning it into an old-style "anti-colonialist" revivalist meeting. Their argument is the famillar all-purpose one that anything that goes wrong in a developing country, after however many decades of independence and however many billions of dollars of aid, is due to "colonialist exploitation" in the past, Rome is meant to help. Yet rarely have so many axes been ground, not to remove obstacles, but to attack those few countries able and willing to help, and especially America. . . All accuse America of wanting to make profits out of food. But in this case all it needs to do is to produce, corner the market (as others do in oil) and sell at monopoly prices. Instead it calls a conference to increase production elsewhere, reduce consumption and build up crisis etocks.

-From the Daily Telegraph (London).

Rise in Price of Gold

The present extra nervousness of leading currencies and the further rise in the price of gold reflect general fear and uncertainty as much as any particular rational calculations about the prospects for the world economy or for individual national economies. Whenever fear and uncertainty increase there is a marked tendency for currency holders to seek refuge in familiar places to sell weaker currencies such as the U.S. dollar, the British pound and the Freuch franc and to buy the traditionally stronger currencies like the West German mark as well as gold.

The present spasm is no exception; and the British authorities have once again reason to be thankful that the Arab governments' reluctance to place too high a proportion of their deposits in American hands tells in favor of the pound sterling, which they regard as a friendlier currency. The fact that the United States is a friend of Israel counts strongly in Arab minds; and as a result Britain has enjoyed a larger inflow of short-term deposits of oil surplus money than could have been expected on the strength of a purely economic appraisal,

Rockefeller on the Stand

By James Reston

WASHINGTON-It's going to be a while before Nelson Rockefeller is confirmed by the Congress as vice-president of the United States, but he'll make it if he keeps his temper, and the long delay, while a little scary with Carl Albert as the designated pinch hitter for President Ford, has some advantages.

The right honorable gentlemen on Capitol Hill who are doing the questioning wouldn't like to answer for themselves the questions they are asking Rockefeller, but they have serious work to do. They want to establish the idea that the vice-presidency is not a nothing job, and that nominees for that office must be scrutinized and decontaminated before being certified under the 25th Amendment as safe and respectful poten-presidents of the great republic. Especially, they want the nominee to remember who does the certifying around here.

TV Exposure

It may also be that the senators, who of course are all Biblereading. God-fearing men, are trying to prove that it is easier for a camel to pass through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter the kingdom of heaven. Normally most senators are partial to rich folk, but in this they went to demonstrate that (1) the Congress is the watchdog of the people; (2) the tical of Rockefeller as it was of Nixon; and (3) the Congress has potential presidents of its own, whose qualities can scarcely be appreciated unless they get protracted exposure on free national commercial television. Rockefeller is a little impatient and even resentful of all this savage questioning on The Hill. He bridles a bit about being asked to explain how his wealth enhanced his political power, and he says he has overcome the handicaps of poverty—as if these were equal hurdles. But on the whole, this televised grilling of Rockefeller is probably the best thing that has happened to him since he met "Happy."

In his long and useful career in the public service, something has always held Rockefeller back. It was not merely the public feeling that his wealth gave him an unfair advantage over his political opponents, but paradoxically, that, because of his wealth, he seemed determined to prove that he was just one of the hoys. He developed a public manner that seemed vaguely out of character. He always sounded too cheery about the latest disaster. too glad to see people he had every right to detest. There was something amiable about his "hiya fella," but it came through as a pose and it hurt him. Down to Reality

The confirmation hearings here in Washington stripped him down to reality. He was no longer making the best speeches money could buy, but was slone at 65. fighting not with but against his wealth for the national role that has always eluded him in the past. He resented the leaks and what be regarded as the occasional invasions of his privacy, but in the process, be was finally able to reveal his character and his wide knowledge of national and world affairs, and in the end. these are the things that will undoubtedly see him through

There are powerful forces ranged against him. He has collected enemies over the years. He has been too progressive for the Re- Laurance Rockefeller, the money publican conservatives, and lately, too conservative for the Democratic leftists, and too unpredictable for a lot of people in the middle-all of whom fear that making him vice-president might put him in the White House in the election of 76.

But despite all the disclosures about his wealth and his fiddling with money to produce a propa-ganda book against Arthur Goldberg, the main thing that comes through in these hearings so far is that, all good and had things considered, this is a serious and experienced man who can probably fill the vice-presidency as well as anybody else President Ford is likely to nominate.

After all the evidence is in the main question will still be whether he can do the job, and if Rockefeller is rejected, who will then be nominated in his place? Here the record of President Ford's original decision to nominate Rockefeller is interesting.

He eliminated many possible candidates from Elliot Richardson of Massachusetts to Gov. Ronald Resgan of California, and got down to his "short-list" of three: Rockefeller, George Bush of Texas. former chairman of the Republican National Committee, and Donald Rumsfeld of Ulinois, former congressman and U.S. Ambassador to NATO Headquarters in Brussels, and now his chief of staff in the White House.

A Guess

The guess here and it is a little more than a guess—is that if the Congress rejects Rockefeller between now and Christmas, or postpones the decision until the new Congress in January and refuses to confirm Rockefeller after that, the President would probably turn to Rumsfeld, an attractive young man and undoubtedly a leader in the coming political generation.

But going through the nominating procedure once again under feld or somebody else would post-pone the organization of the Ford administration for another three

Bending the UN's Rules

By C.L. Sulzberger

PARIS_Twice this week the United Nations bent its traditions, if not its rules, first by inviting the head of a political movement, Yassir Azazat, to address its assembly as if he represented a government, and second by suspending South Africa's participation in the current ses-

The chiefs of the Algerian, Cypriot and Mozambique guerrilla movements never were receivedor even aspired to that honor. Yet Arafat staged a triumphant entry. A careful reading of the UN Charter shows no clause specifically barring participation—when invited—of a nonmember or a nonstate, but it hasn't occurred before.

The case of South Africa is different although the two examples are implicitly related. Both stem from the preponderant fact of today's General Assembly composition: a heavy majority of votes from the underdeveloped Third World, actively endorsed (despite their own rivalry) by Russia and China.

Bankrupt

Gone are the days when, as with Korea, a strong pro-U.S. bloc could swing the international or-ganization behind it. U.S. diplomacy in the Third World has been proven politically bankrupt. American money helped put one after another former colony on its feet but American policy sought to compose so many contradictions and was often so ineptly expressed that its in-fluence declined to virtually nil Thus, for example, we are today in the position of being disliked in varying degree by India, Pakistan and Bangladesh. There must be something wrong with our formulations if (while requesting more aid) so many nations oppose us. Chins, by contrast, has deliberately courted Afro-Asian favor and, with slight expenditure, has made great headway. The U.S. opposition to Arafat's appearance at the UN came as no surprise because of our support for Israel. Washington also opposed the assembly's suspension of South Africa.

Moral Offenders

In that action the UN ignored its constitution. Article 5 stipulates that a suspension must be. recommended by the Security Coincil: This was not done with South Africa. Moreover, one must review the roll of moral offenders during the UN's history in order to judge this action.

I hasten to atress that as anyone who has read my dispatches all these years must know. I have constantly opposed bigotry or racism in any form and specifically denounced Pretoria's policy of apartheid.

Right now, nevertheless, the black state of Uganda (which sits at the assembly) is involved in one of the weirdest, most cruel patterns of government brutality Chopping up opponents and feed. ing them to crocodiles is not a lesser sin than South African segregation. And Chad (which also voted) sometimes bories Christians alive in anthills.

When Stalin still ruled Russia millions of its people were in prison camps or execution cellers. This was widely known even though Solchenitsyn's "Gulap Archipelago" had yet to be written But Russia remained a pillar of the UN.

While thousands of Romanian were dying along the fevered Danube-Black Sea Canal, no one talked of "suspension." After Russia and its allies invaded Czechoslovakia in 1968—or Britain, France and Israel invaded Egypt in 1956 they stayed in the UN without more than a tut-tut.

Portugal ran a fullscale, threepronged colonial war; Haiti was bullied by murderous Tontons Macoutes of Papa Doc Duvalier, and Indonesians (in 1965-66) slaughtered some 350,000 to 500. 000 "Communists" (mostly Chinese minority), sometimes playing football with their heads, All stayed in the UN.

Fair Play

If an international organization intends to practice fair play-a basic objective of the UN-it should do so toward all. The dictates of a majority according to its prejudices one year should not automatically be embodied as e precedent for the future.

It might have been wiser to postpone Arafat's speech until be had formed a "government in exile." His global standing remains to be formalized and one may only pray (dubiously) that arguing his case before the General Assembly may lessen the possibility of another Middle East war. If such proves true it will seem unfortunate that similar appearances weren't encouraged for earlier de facto political leaders.

To "suspend" South Africa is unfair emotionalism and as segregationist on a world scale as the silly, cruel discrimination that country practices at home. Above all, it was not only illogical to oust the Pretoria government at a moment when it is showing serious signs of reform; but blatantly unjust in terms of all other transgressors, past and present, who have smilingly kept and still keep their seats in socalled respectability's greatest

Important features of the Omega Megaquartz 2'400 include a device for synchronization with an official time signal, and a special magnetic clutch - a time-zone changer - for international travel-

These features all contribute to the individuality of the Megaquartz 2'400, making it truly exclusive.

The Megaquartz 2'400: distinguished leader of the Omega electronic range.

The Omega Megaquartz 2'400 Marine Chronometer is unique. It sets new standards for the electronic watch. And it is not alone in the Omega collection. Here may be found watches using the most sophisticated electronic systems: sonic resonators, quartz-crystal resonators and solid state with digital readout.

The choice of systems and styles offered by Omega and the price range of their electronic models is unequalled in the watch industry.

A Rare Look at a French Glass Maker

By Souren Melikian

PARIS, Nov. 15 (IHT).—From time to time, Drouot suctions suddenly focus attention on arthats whose work may only be seen with great difficulty else-

When it comes to the late 19th century, these may be quite important creators whose production is scattered about in rather obscure public institutions and private collections, artists unknown except to a handful of researchers.

This happened Wednesday when Raymond de Nicolay, with the assistance of expert Jean-Pierre Camard, sold objets d'art, including pottery, glass and metalwork, dating from the 1880s to the 1920s. For the first time, those who take an interest in the sources of modern art could see side by side a small selection of works by Henry Cros (1840-1907).

Cros was the first Western artist in modern times to use pale de verre, a material pro-duced by grinding crystal to dust, adding a fluxing medium and coloring it. By applying succes-sive layers of different colors, Cros hoped to create a new kind of polychrome sculpture. But, fact, his process was known the ancient Egyptians. Yet his rediscovery was to influence the more important glass makers his generation and allowed him to produce some very sur-prising, if not always beautiful, actilipture—mostly bas-reliefs but also some carvings in the round. His style is curiously reminiscent of Maillel but has a softer touch. Little scholarly work has been done on Cros. There was one article published by A.M. Belfort, formerly associated with the

Musée de Sèvres, who is now Camard's assistant, François Duret-Robert, a French art historian whose pioneer hiographical study of Cros is to appear in the December issue of Connaissance des Arts, said that even the date of the artist's death had not been known to specialists

Conventional Start

Cros's work is fascinating in many respects-not least because he started out as a conventional artist and ended as an avantgarde creator much as did another famous glass maker, Emile Gallé. But unlike the latter, be was not in the limelight.

In the 1880s, Cros did wax carvings with polychrome coloring. This was a revivalist idea, harking back to the technique popular in the late Middle Ages and the Renaissance but abandoned thereafter. Soon Cros's sculpture moved from the academic style to a freer manner. An exceedingly rare portrait (35.2 by 24.8 centimeters) in low relief, molded in honey-colored wax, with touches of red, was included in Wednesday's sale.

The portrait, which bore the artist's initials, had belonged to Hebrard, the founder who cast trregularly shaped and showing busts of nudes against completely impressionistic backgrounds. The turning point had come when, in 1891, he bad been put on a monthly retainer by the government manufactory in Sevres. In 1896, a special kiln was built for him there, enabling him to produce monumental reliefs. At Wednesday's sale, a group of the pottery studies from the 1887-1888 period came up for

(There is an example of such relief at the Musée Victor Hugo in Paris. Other such ambitious creations are stored in various institutions, among them, the Musée des Arts Décoratifs in Paris which, while it owns a large relief, does not have it on public view.)

Cros's work apart, the auction was characterized by fluctuations reflecting current problems. Some works by Gallé sold well, There was a series of high-quality pieces from Edmond Taigny's collection He was one of the founders of the Union Central des Arts Décoratifs-a private foundation anticipating 20th-century Americanstyle foundations—which gave rise to the present Musée des Arts Décoratifs. Taigny was a personal friend of Gallé's and a connoisseur of avant-garde glass and pottery. All his Galles were single creations, made by Galle himself, and often signed and dated.

The star pieces in the Wednesday sale were a pair of unique, polychrome glass flasks shaped like two exotic birds perched on rocks. The price: 77,500 francs. The expert said the birds could have made more last year. Camard was, however, pleased with the bid of 54,570 francs for a fine polychrome glass bowl, made especially for the 1900 World's Pair in Paris. The expert said that a comparable piece-but of larger size, making it less desirable to real compois-seurs but more interesting to average buyers because of the -had been auctioned in Versailles in March for 77,570 francs.

Everything considered, Camard said that some of Wednesday's transactions were on a level with prices last spring.

Yet several works of the very finest quality did not fare well. Two superb lacquered metal bowls by Jean Dunand were acquired by Paris dealers at about a third of what they would have fetched in the spring. Two of the five stoneware vases by Emile Decoeur, one of the greatest potters of the early 20th century, were bought in.

Meanwhile, Jean Louis Picard, conducting a sale of pomple art Oiterally "fireman"-le conventional), managed to extract 12,080 francs for an unforgettable piece of trash, a painting by James Tissot (1836-1902) called "The Prehistoric Woman." The underbidder remarked that his unsuccessful offer was only half of what the painting would-have cost last June. Be that as it may, it will probably be 50 per cent cheaper next June.

Wols ranks, in my view, among the outstanding artists of the past half-century. An exhibition at the Paris Museum of Modern Art last December assembled watercolors and oils, some of which are to be seen in the present show. Wols is classified as a tachiste—he seems also to have influenced the manner Mathieu—but it is in his later watercolors, in their extrordinarfly miniaturistic draftsmanship, in their abstract yet organic form, that he finds his most personal language.

Vznarsky, Galerie L'Oefi de Bosuf, 58 Rue Quincampoix, Paris 4, to Nov. 23.

Vanarsky sculpts an arm, a face, a cat, a breast or an apple out of wood, paints it in weathered colors and slices it like a salami. A slow-moving crankshaft runs through a central axis and the whole thing gently writhing. There are also drawings and some static sculptures which make a more interesting use of the sliced-salami principle: more interesting because t'iey create a greater sense of movement than do the pieces that actually move.

Tenor Bites at Critic-Is This the End of Civilization?

By Harold C. Schonberg

The things that have been happening in Elights, I the United States the past few weeks! A Democratic landslide, olson, tenor talking back to a music critic. A highly touted violinist bloom, tenor talking back to a music critic or make a music critic or nothing but encore 1. When the tenor was Michele Molese, a leading artist of the New York.

made of Through the years he has been criticized by this writer for more than inches? Through the years he has been criticized by this writer for more than inches? Through the years he has been building up, and about two weeks ago the dam chird of loke. He did something that other singers have muttared about that pehad has had the nerve to do. After a fortismed high that nobody has had the nerve to do. After a fortissimo high in "The Masked Ball," he suddenly advanced to the footlights.

h. Contag. hat pinched high C, he loudly amounced, "was for Harold C. Contag. Inonberg." There! He said it! He got it out of his system!

He also got fired for unprofessional conduct.

Molese may have overreacted, but perhaps as fill Julius Rudel.

and the purishment that the crime? All the purishment the the crime? All inding at Molese did was add to the galety of the middles. He had never the company of the middles and the capture will not try it again.

The company will not try it again.

The company will not try it again.

The Violinist

As for the violinist with the peculiar program, he was Engene odor. This personable, 24-year-old fiddler tied for second place in odor. This personable, 24-year-old fiddler tied for second place in odor. This personable, M-year-old fiddler fied for second place in the Moscow competition earlier this year, and he was the first American boy, and the feeling was that now the World of the olm had an equivalent to Van Cliburn in the piano world. His chilharmonic Hall appearance was sold out, and every other seat the med occupied by an adoring maiden. These girls listened with their hands way strate their head. Food definitely has sex appeal.

The selected a program conditing of places by Sarpeate Wienigweld.

He selected a program consisting of pieces by Sarasate, Wieniawski, Chalkovsky, Paganini and the like. Aside from Ravel's "Trigane," here was nothing meaty anywhere (and there are those who will gue that the Ravel showpiece is also pretty thin stuff).

In a way this could be construed as a shrewd move. Fodor probanaly figured that every violinist comes to New York with Bach, or eethoven and Brahms. The competition is stupendous. But nobody the mes to the stage of Philharmonic Hall with Sarasate, Wieniawski at and Tehaikovsky. Ergo, the competition is nil. Fodor has staked out n area entirely for himself.

But can he play it? His concert showed fleet fingers and a big to rough technique, as could be expected of a prizewinner in a major mapetition. What it did not show was a feeling for the fragile style mbodied in the kind of music that he so clearly wants to specialize in. Is it harder to play the Wieniawski "Legende" or the Sarasate "an Sprice Basque" than the "Kreutzer Sonata" or the Bach Chaconne? Well, yes and no.

Elegance .

Wine in the acknowledged great works of the literature of course demand eater depth, concentration, focus, shape and maturity. But 19th-unce, intury salon music demands something else, and it is something nat the younger musicians, brought up in a literal-minded tradition, and awfully hard to master. And that word is elegance. The traditions of romantic performance practice are still a mystery to most busicians. Either they play romantic music with a strict, severe pproach, or they veer over into excess in the name of rubato and spression. It is hard to think of any young musician today who can revious century had as part of their very psyche.

This is not guesswork or hearsay. Listen to any of the Kreisler ecordings of salon music. Listen (if you can find it) to Morint's arly (C. 1925) recording of Wienlawski's "Caprice-Valse." Listen to he Heifetz acoustics. All of these musicians, and so many others of if the time, had certain things in common. There was an emphasis -n sound. There was a kind of robato phrasing in which the basic 1.0-10 (#85) meter was never disturbed. There was constant rise and fall to the line. As one studies the work of these violinists, it becomes clear that their art was surprisingly classic, in that the playing had a control and a purity far removed from the prevalent notion of high romanticism as an object of yulgarity.

That is what makes the salon music of the day so hard for modern violinists. They simply do not have the feeling for the delicate adjustments that made the work of Kreisler and his contemporaries so poised and aristocratic. Fodor certainly didn't. He attempted to overpower the music instead of carees it. Since the music was slight to begin with the result inevitably was a complete misrepresentation. Yes, this music is very hard to play. Today's brilliant kids can whiz through the technical problems. But the evocation of a period, the fragrance of the melodies, the concept of branura technique used to minimize rather than maximize a piece of music—there those brilliant kids find themselves in the middle of the Sahara without a canteen.

LONDON THEATER

'Kennedy's Children'-Deft and Witty

By John Walker

LONDON, Nov. 15 (IET) —It is a while since the fringe came up with a theatrical experience offering something that could not be found in commercial or subsidised theater, something well written, well acted and well ected. Robert Patrick's fronically titled "Kennedy's Children" at North London's Kings Head Theatre Club is all of these things a deft and witty, as well as saddening and occasionally shallow, commentary on the

Mr. Patrick, an apparently prolific American playwright with more than 100 Off and Off-Off Broadway productions to his credit, works in a familiar vein. He belongs to the through-a-glass-darkly school of American playwrights—the style of barroom confessional—full of 4runken acidity and sentimentality-favored by such as Eugene O'Neill and tee Williams.

His play consists of five intercut monologues by a group of loners gathered in a shabby har on the Lower East Side of New York. The time is now, but they are all living in the past, the period defined by the presidency and the assassination of John F. Kennedy. As one character remarks, they all suffer from their own massive brain hemorrhages: Their memories bleed all over the

For everyone, the hopes they had have died, their lives have soured although only one associates this darkening with the death of Kennedy and she is in some ways the most pathetic of the derelicts for she still nourishes a small hope for the future. In the play's most poignant moment - beautifully delivered by Vivian Pickles-she describes how she tried to explain the Kennedy story to a class of subnormal children who could not understand so that she was

It is, though, a lamentation. Not for the 1960s, or for Presider: Kennedy, but for the present, I'm whose wit fails to keep his despair at bay, Mark (Richard Oldfield), who has returned from Vietnam a confused and paranoid killer; Carls (Jan Waters), who dates

But many of these "low" P/E stocks heve weak earnings, or are reletively obscure, and therefore offer little attraction to serious investors who now went to line up their "re-entry" strategy for e ma-

However, The Value Line investment Survey also reveals a number of well-known issues, listed on the New York Stock Exchange, which ere selling wey below their P/E "norms" yet, according to our estimetes, have record-high earnings in sight for 1974. Here is just e sampling:

Ampco-Pittsburgh Corp. Continental Copper Colt Industries Cyclops Cerp. LTV Corp.

Lessona Corp. Occidental Petroleum Reynolds Metals Tesoro Patroleum Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel

Each of these stocks ie eelling at less than 3 times its estimated 1974 earnings. The averege price of these stocke works out to be about $13, against average 1974 estimated eerninge of nearly $6.97 per share—for an averege P/E of 2.3 (Value Line Survey

Each of these stocks, according to Velue Line estimates, is expected to achieve all-time record eernings in 1974. On average, we expect this year's per share eernings to be some 85% higher than in the best previous earninge year of each of the stocks.

Each of these companies has sizeable sales. The 1973 sales of the smellest exceeded $90 million. The average sales of all ten last year were well over helf e billion dollars.

IMPORTANT WARNING

Investors who believe that major merket recovery is not far off, and are aeger not to miss out on unusual "bargains," may be tempted to rush into stocks like these wilhout further examination. We urge you not to do so. The liet above is presented NOT as a suggested course of investment action but rather to illustrete the unueual condition of the merket.

You need a lot more than isolated bite of information, intriguing as such evidence may appear. Indeed, we believe you chould not seriously consider any stock (including those above) until you have checked the letest weekly Velue Line Survey as to the etock's current...

e) Rank for relative Probable Merkel Performence in the next 12 months-The renke range from 1 (Highest) to 5 (Lowest); relative to more then 1500 other stocks under continuing raview. (While not every stock will always ect in eccordance with its Value Line Performence rating, such a large majority have in the past for reasons that are logical thet we believe you can weight the odds heavily in your favor by taking these ratings into account before reaching your decision).

b) Rank for relative investment Safety (1 down to 5);

c) Estimated Yield in the next 12 months;

d) Estimated Appreciation Potentielity in the next 3 to 5 years.

UPDATED EVERY WEEK

Every week, the Value Line Survey updates these key ranks and estimates- lor EACH of more then 1500 stocks under continuous review-and presants, for each, its latest P/E, earnings end dividend deta.

In eddition, each of the more than 1500 stocks is the subject of a comprehensive new full-page report at least once every three months-including 23 series of vital financial and operating statistics going back 10 years and estimated 3 to 5 years in the

Whatever it is you are looking for in slocks, Value Line gives you more date end measurements with which to make informed judgments-on each of more than 1500 stocks-then eny other investment source we know of. And it's organized for quick and easy reference. (With the latest weekly Value Line Survey, for instence, it would take you just minutes to check which stocks have current P/Es below 2 or 3 or 4 or 5.)

GET READY NOW

Today's market, in our judgment, is more deeply undervalued than at any time since 1949. The unweighted Value Line Composite Average of more than 1500 stocks recently was more than 50% below its 1961 starting point.

Once e major market rise does get under way, it is likely to move with considerable speed in its earliest stage. Now, we believe, is the time to get ready, with deliberation, so that you won't have to rush in indiscriminately leter on. No one really knows where the precise bottom will be or when. But we are sure thet barring war or revolution, stocks cannot be far from rock bottom now. To help you prepare to take maximum edventage, we invite you to eccept the following offer:

The most likely explanation offered so far has been that the oil-producing states have been buying Swiss francs in quantity, but this has yet to be confirmed.

Drops Against Mark

Considerable speculation in the deutsche mark was unleashed by Chancellor Helmut Schmidt's statement that Germany would not resist further appreciation of the mark, but so far the dollar has declined less against the mark than against the Swiss franc. In today's activity, the dollar dropped to 2,4960 marks from 2.53, bringing its decline for the week to about 22 per cent.

Risewhere, the dollar was mixed. Because the Benefux currencies are linked to the deutsche mark in the joint European currency float, the dollar declined sub-stantially against those currencles. However, it rose against the French franc to 4.6975 from 4.6720. ak Federal Reserve Bank had . Sterling managed to make a

But now gold has become a political factor. South Africa is apparently shifting to the view that a: the major source of gold in the Western world it can now afford to withhold some of its supply, keep the price up, bolster its reserves and avoid, as a result, some of the recessionary problems that might occur next year as a result of the general downturn in Western economies.

IMF Sales Possible

WASHINGTON, NOV. 15 (AP-DJ) -If the United States and other major monetary nations clear the way next year for In-ternational Monetary Fund gold sales in the world's free markets the agency could become a big supplier.

IMP figures show that the 126nation agency has gold reserves of its own amounting to about $28 billion at today's world free mar-ket prices. The gold is valued by the IMF at about $6.5 billion based on the official gold price of $42.22 an ounce

U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger suggested last night in Chicago that a new trust fund be set up, under IMF management, to approve loans at concessional terms to developing nations for their oil imports.

"The DMF itself could contribute the profits from IMP gold sales undertaken for this pur-pose," Mr. Kissinger said, urging the IMP's interim committee on monetary reforms to examine "on an urgent basis" the U.S. proposal for the new IMF trust fund

Ind. Standard Eyes Oxy For Merger

NEW YORK, Nov. 15 (AP-DJ) -Standard Oil of Indians said today it has approached Occidental Petroieum Corp. on the possibility of combining the two companies. But Armand Hammer, Oxy chairman, says be is unwilling to consider any such combination.

Indiana Standard management indicated it would propose to its directors that as an initial step toward a combination an exchange offer be made of Indiana Standard's common stock for the common stock of Occidental.

The number of shares of Indiana Standard common stock to be offered for each share of Oxy's common stock would be determined by dividing $17 by the average market price of Standard's stock for a period prior to the offering date.

Based on the closing market price of Indiana Standard stock on the New York Stock Exchange yesterday, 0.193 share of Indiana Standard common stock would be issued for each share of Occidental's common stock. Under this formula, the number of Indiana Standard shares ultimately offer-market conditions. John Swearingen, Standard chairman, said he hop-ed the proposal would be received favorably by Occidental's share-

this amount, depending on future holders and management. However, Occidental said that statements by Indiana Standard about a possible merger are "misleading," and chairman Hammer said the proposed offer was

"ridiculous"

Mr. Hammer said Occidental has not really held any talks with Indiana Standard but was approached only late yesterday by Mr. Swearingen and an investment banker concerning the possibility of an exchange of stock.

Mr. Hammer said he told Mr. Swearingen at the outset that such a proposal would not be in tha blic interest nor in the interest of Occidental shareholders and further that it would be in violation of anti-trust laws.

·Tile sharp improvement in Japan's trade halance was attributed to a deepening recession in the domestic economy. The Finance Ministry noted that lower demestic demand produced a 13.6-per-cent decline in import volume last month (higher prices resulted in the hig increase in dollar terms) while a rush by Japanese companies to zell goods abroad resulted in an exceptionally large 32-per-cent jump in export quantity from the level

October, 1973. Japanese corporations, which have difficulty laying off employees as a result of the peculiar nature of this country's employment system, usually feel obliged to maintain production at a high ievel at long as possible, exporting more if necessary to sustain such activities. Japan's balance of payments also benefited from receipts of "petrodoilars," although Finance Ministry officials have declined to make any comment on the specifics of these inflows.

It is understood, however, that Saudi Arabia deposited $500 million with Japanese commercial banks, both in September and in October. The deposits, guaranteed by the Japanese government, mature in five years.

How to buy a diamond with your eyes shut and never live to regret it.

Some people allow themselves the luxury of offering dia-moods that are attractively deceptive and misleading.

WE DO NOT

We are one of the oldest and largest firms in Antwerp and value our good name more than your mooey.

THE PROOF?

Cail us today—or, better still, come and see us. By the time you leave you'll be a diamond expert—if you pay attention to what we say! It will be well worth your while.

If you buy a diamond from us, its price will be absolutely right and its quality guaran-teed by a

from the ANTWERP DIAMOND COMPANY a certificate which means that if the occasion arises this same diamond can be bought back from you without argument—aoywhere in the world.

WHICH TRIBE DO YOU BELONG TO?

By Alberto Moravia. Translated from the Italian by Angus Davidson. 218 pages. Farrar, Straus. and Giroux. $7.95.

Reviewed by Anatole Broyard

A CCORDING to Alberto Mora-via, the "Africa sickness" that seizes many whites who go there is a form of nostalgia for the world before history. He defines history as "the name givty to its own au tonomy and victory over natural conditions." History weighs heavily on Western culture. It is intoxicated with history, and today this intoxication seems closer to that of a crying or paranold drunk than to a happy one who is "feeling no pain." Africa was a complement to the powerless power of Western civilization a hallucinatory alternative, an indispensable, irreplaceable source of anti-history. It was a refuge not yet over-grown with definition or choked To "discover" Africa, Mr. Moravia implies, was to destroy it, for in his innocence it was impossible for the African to resist the novelty of European civilization. Novelty is a worse enemy to African culture than the climate, the difficulty of life and all the indigenous diseases put together. As the author says, there is no greater suffering than to feel your cultural foundations giving way beneath your feet. Though we "civilized" peoples have felt something of this ourselves, it was more severe for Africans, whose world degenerated from mysterious" to "depressed." The "dark continent" has not been improved by neon.

Which Tribe Do You Belong To?" is the record of five African journeys the author made during the 1960s and early 1970s. He was too late for Hemingway's Africa, which he describes as an essentially Victorian concept. and just in time to see the people "progress" from peasant to pro-letariat almost without interme-diate stages. In his opinion, most of them prefer capitalism to Communism hecause, having suffered it, they had a predictable desire to possess it: hecause they are too individualistic for the bureaucracy of Communism: and because their long habituation to fetishism and magic prepared them for the irrationality of what Mr. Moravia calls neo-capitalism. Magic, the author observes, is an answer to the nameless fright. the perpetual vague terror, that prehistory inspires. It is surprising that he does not draw the obvious parallel with the beginnings of Western religion. In speaking of the attempt to Christianize the African, he remarks that the missionary churches have none of the grandeur that helped to dazzle Europeans into belief. The nearest approaches to grandeur in the new Africa are the hotels, banks and shops: Accordingly, these make up the dogma of the most attractive "religion." In Mr. Moravia's opinion, the African is one of the most "contriving" types in the world, which should stand him in good stead in the neo-capitalist scheme.

While Africa once symbolized the wide-open spaces of the irrational, Europeans are now introducing competing forms of their own, which the author describes with a leonine irony. To?" is as rich in aesthetic perceptions as political ones, Mr. Moravia captures the difference between the neocapitalist and the traditional African physiognomy very well: one is "psychological," the other "sculpturesque." He saw a great deal of the Masai. which is like going to a party peopled exclusively by fashion models, so perhaps his "sculp-turesque" is rather flattering. He makes an interesting, if snobbish, remark: "That beauty is a kind of clothing . . . a beautiful body is never truly naked."

He is disappointing, however, on the subject of African music which he describes as "simple." When he finds Africans dancing to the engine rhythm of an ex-cavator or a rock drill, he mistakes this for an example of their "simplicity," not realizing, as the jazz historian Marshall Stearns pointed out, that the African's sense of rhythm is so highly developed that he automatically supplies a structural constant against which these sounds are heard as "riffing." or improvisation.

Mr. Moravia turns a nice phrase though, when he describes the African proletariat as "dancing" its way into modern indus-trial civilization. Unfortunately, this signalizes the end of the purity of African dance, just as the intrusion of white spectators in the black clubs of New Orleans and Harlem turned jazz into a self-conscious rather than a spontaneous expression.

The author and his translator. Angus Davidson, are both in good form here. Some of Mr. Moravia's flair seems to be purchased at a certain expense of contradiction: when he says, for example, that in the timeless context of prehistory, the vista of eternity is "squalid." Or when characterizes the African landscape as a monotony of reiteration and shapelessness. But toese are easy to forgive, for most of "Which Tribe Do You Belong To?" is a voluptuous collision between an extraordinary old-world sensibility and a new world whose like we have never seen before. One of the events Mr. Moravia poticed supplies a very neat image for Africa's situation today. He visited a market, a "feverish, excited, festive, panic atmosphere ... which is at the same time a religious meeting, a political assembly, a magical reunion, a cultural exchange an erotic outburst"-and at that market his native but town-oriented chauffeur bought a spearhead to take home as a souvenir to his bush-country wife.

NBA Braves Streaking at Top Despite Loss of Star Guard

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—The Buffalo Braves have adjusted their game because of the absence of injured Ernie DiGregorio, their classy playmaking guard, but the other teams in the National Basketball Association can't ad-

Miss Heldman Is Easy Victor In Dewar Tennis

LONDON, Nov. 15.—The U.S. Wightman Cup captain, Julie Heldman, soured a straight-sets victory over Natalie Fuchs in the semifinals of the $70,000 Dewar Cup indoor tennis tournament in London today.

Miss Heldman won 7-6, 6-3. In men's play, Jimmy Connors, of the United States, crushed title-bolder Tom Okker, 6-0, 6-2, today to reach the finals. Guillermo Vilas was beaten, 7-6, 2-6, 1-6, by Brian Gottfried in the other semifinals.

Kuki Advances

MANTIA, Nov. 15 (UPI).-Jun Kuki claimed another seeded victim today when he beat seventh-ranked Jurgen Fassbender, 6-1, 1-6, 7-6, to enter the semificals of the $50,000 Philippine international tennis classic. Kuki will meet Hans Pohmann in the semifinals. Top-seeded John Newcomba won an easy—6-3, 7-5—match over Roger Taylor. Newcombe will meet Ismael oi-Shafei in the other semifinal match. Shafel scored a 6-4, 6-2 victory over Jeff Austin.

defense, which was the worst in the NBA, allowing 1118 points a game. Now, they are 10-3. "I haven't given the responsi-bility to any one player to take over for Ernie," Ramsay said.

The whole team is doing it. "I told my players to concentrate on the things that will help them win, like playing hetter defense," he said "We won't score as many points and we'll miss Ernie's ball handling, so we have to distribute those things among other players, and they all have done a good job."

The player who did it most for the Braves against the Ceitics was Randy Smith. He had a game high of 27 points, including 17 in the last quarter. Jim Mc-Millian added 20 points and Bob McAdoo, the league's leading scorer, got 13. Jo Jo White was high for Boston with 25.

The Celtics have a similar problem-an injury to a star playerbut they haven't compensated as well as the Braves. Their center, Dave Cowens, has been out all season with a foot injury.

Celtics coach Tom Heinsohn said after the game: "They played well, we played well, but they got the key baskets and we didn't We did well on the boards [winning the rebound battle 62-55) but we didn't get any points inside." In other NBA action, New York downed Cleveland 94-89, Houston heat Chicago 105-96 and Portland defeated Atlanta 104-92. In the American Basketball Association. San Antonio edged Kentucky 102-100 in overtime, St. Louis beat Virginia 118-95 and New York riefeated Memphis 108-101.

A Preview Of Games In the NFL By William N. Wallace

NEW YORK, Nov. 15 (NYT). -Following is a preview of games to be played in the National Football League this weekend, with won-lost-tied team records in parentheses: NATIONAL CONFERENCE

Dallas, (5-4) at Washington (6-3) -These two will meet twice within 12 days and the goal for both is at least the conference wild card spot in the playoffs. Bill Kilmer will start at quarter-back for the Redskins with Sonny Jurgensen, who has been Gevastating, ready for relief. The Cowboys, who have won four straight, are building up steam behind the running of Calvin Bill. Betting choice: Washington by 2.

St. Louis (7-2) at Philadelphia (4-5)—The Cardinals hope to get a full game from Terry Metcaif, their offensive wonder. "I hate to rely on one player but we're not the same without him," says coach Don Coryell. With playoff hopes gone and abundant injuries, the Eagles may be down. Choice: St. Louis

Green Bay (4-5) at Minnesota (7-2)—Agains; their Black Blue Division foes, the Vikes have won 30 of 35 times since 1968. They best the Packers earlier this season, 32-17. John Hadi was fair in his first start for the Packers against the Bears. Choice: Minnesota by 10.

Los Angeles (7-2) at New Orleans (3-6)—A victory or tie the Rams. Their Lawrence Mc-Cutcheon has gained 859 yards rushing, or four more yards than the total of the Ram's nine opponents. That says it all. Howard Stevens, 5-5, 165, has returned kickoffe 641 yards for Saints. Choice: Los Angeles

San Francisco (2-7) at Chi-cago (3-6)—The 49ers, who will start Tom Owen at quarterback, have lost seven straight, a club record. The Bears have not scored a touchdown in their last 15 quarters, Choice: San Fran-

New York Giants (2-7) at Detroit (4-5)-Two of the Giants' wounded will play, John Mendennall, who represents about half of the defense, and Ron Johnson, who has represented far less than 1-11th of the offense. The Lions have almost no rushing attack, but their players are better than the Giants'. Choice: Detroit by 7 points.

AMERICAN CONFERENCE

Buffalo (7-2) at Miami (7-2) The Dolphins have won 28 straight in the Orange Bowl and have given up only 17 points in their lest four games. They are back in Soper Bowl form. When O. J. Simpson wears out, the bills play Larry Walkins instead and start to pass. Their defense will get a hreak if Larry Csonka is out due to a hurt ankie. Choice: Mismi by 7.

New York Jets (2-7) at New England (6-3)-In their earlier game, won by the Patriots, 24-0, they blitzed Joe Namath effectively. But the Jets' line has toughened and there are three healthy runners ready—Emerson Boozer, Bob Burns, the surprising rookle, and Hank Bjork-lund. The Pats are fit but may be running scared after two successive defents, Choice: New England by 10.

San Diego (3-6) at Oakland (8-1)—The Raiders bare won eight straight and have the best record and the best statistics in the league. They can clinch their division title with a victory here if Denver leses. The Chargers making progress. Don

Woods, their sensational rookle runner, returns efter chsence last Sunday, Choice. Oakland Cincinnass (6-3) at Rouston (4-5)—The Otlers have πcn three straight by passing but they are not much on defense and the Bengals will try to run over and by them. Cincinnati somehow keeps replacing injured running hacks and linebackers. Choice: Cincinnati by 7.

Pittshurgh 16-2-1) at Cleve. land (3-61—The Steelers have not won in Cleveland since 1964. Their passing game has been dreadful. Frenchy Fuqua, the forgotten halfback, will play because of injuries to others. The Browns' best offensive weapon has been Greg Pruitt returning kicks. Choice: Pittsburgh by 7.

Kansas City (3-6) at Denver (4-4-1) -The Chiefs have at last hegun to replace stagmant of-fense with five position changes since season opener. Too late for this year. The Broncos' aim is to win four of last five games. It's possible, Choice: Denver

INTERCONFERENCE

(2-7)-Mike Curtis, one of the old Colts who remembers the giory days, has played brilliantly at middle linebacker to little attention. No one has played brilliantly for the Falcons. Choice: Atlanta by 7.

Skip Judo Meet

TEL AVIV. Nov. 15 (AP) .-Britain won two gold medals and Germany won one in the competition for 16 to 18-year-olds in the European judo championships yesterday—a tournament in which only 9 of 32 eligible countries participated.

Several West European nations told Israel they were withdrawing from the meet for financial reasons and Communist nations apparently stayed away for political reasons.

The netions competing were West Germany, Italy, Ireland, Britain, Switzerland, Sweden, the Netherlands, Austria and Israel. A Yugoslav team is expected to arrive late.

Each of the 10 fighters on a team's active list will be paid a minimum of $150 a week for 52 weeks, plus pension and insurance, the league officials said. The fighters will share in 30 per cent of the net gate each night, with the five winners each getting 5 per cent and the five losers splitting the other 5 per

IN AID OF MEDICAL TREATMENT AND RESEARCH

Observer Asylum

By Russell Baker

NEW YORK.—Recently I discovered that I was going a jogged five miles a day in unsane. It was supprisingly placed and interest the control of sane. It was surprisingly pleasant. There were weeks unbroken by fits of melancholin, rage, anxiety, despair, hypochondria or terror. Life, inexplicably, seemed worth living again, and I went through my daily rounds a. whistling "Red-wing" instead of bristling with hostility. Pleasant, yes,

"If you permit yourself to sink into sanity and continue whis tling 'Redwing' like this," ths doctor explained, "you will be unfit to function in American society. You could very well end up in—"

Baker

"In a sace asylum?" He gravely fingered commitment papers.

I had placed myself in his hands after being found in a traffic jam at 41st Street and Ninth Avenue whistling "Red-wing" at the steering wheel while waiting to enter the Lincoln Tunnel

All around me, other motorists smashing their hords, grinding their fenders and bursting blood vessels. The notes of "Redwing" intensified their rage. "What's the matter? Aren't you crazy or something?" they shouted at me.

One must function, after all. How else can America fulfill its destiny? How else can fenders be smashed while going no place. The doctor prescribed strong treatment—television and newspsper immersion.

All of one day I sat straitjacketed at the tube, being doused periodically with torreots of newspaper. Hypochondria burst into full flower almost immediately.

"You'd better quit whistling Redwing,' buster, and get your blood pressure checked," said the "And while you're at it, don't forget-you could be diabetic, have muscular dystrophy. be suffering from alcoholism without even knowing it and drop dead any instant of heart disease, stroke or failure to contribute to the Arthritis Fund." The newspapers suggested that polluted air (presumably in the Antarctic), quit eatlog beef (bowel cancer), stopped sleeping more than eight hours at a stretch (cerebral hemogrhage), and quit kissing women (influenza).

Tension. Fear. Anxiety. Only by changing an entire way of life could I survive to old age. Could I do it? Not likely? Why not? Too set in my ways, pernaps?

Feelings of self-loathing and misery. Then—another dousing of newspapers. Ah, what de spair! "So you live to old age," the newspaper laughed. "Hah! Do you know what that means? Ucemployment. Sleazy - pension boarding houses. Shuffled off to play shuffleboard, starved on Social Security peanuts, ground down by inflationary cost rises, stuffed away in firetrap nursing home."

Intense desire to weep, mehncholia rampant. Sense of hopelesspess.

"Ah, there is bad news tonight." (The box has taken over again. The ozone layer of the atmosphere is being destroyed by gases emitted from aerosol cans." Despair, sense of imminent doom. Guilt. Who is emitting those doomful aerosol gases?

Me. Every time I shave. Intolerable sense of futility to go with guilt. After all, why give up beef, kissing and 8 1/2 hours' sleep, why move to the Antarctic to jog in good air if the ozone layer is going to be wiped out anyhow by shaving cream?

The box attacks from the blind side. That graying hair—yes, it could indeed cost me my job as well as the love of ungray women. That early-evening fatigue-could it really be fronpoor blood?

I shall not go on. I describe only the first hour of television and newspaper immersion, and the full therapy lasts all day, and, in some cases, a full lifetime, At the end, one is normal sgain. Depressed, enraged, anxietyridden, desperate, terrorized—normal. I oo longer whistle "Redwing,"

I have forgotten the tune. The doctor says this is because I am egain well sdjusted to society. Hey, I know an island far away. Let's go.

British Casinos—A Booming Family Affair

LONDON (IET).—The British have always been a betting people. There was cheating in the reign of Cymbeline, Henry VIII played one Sir Miles Partridge for the bells of St. Paul's Church and lost, while Elizabeth I, always more sensible, started a state lottery to earn revenues for harbor repairs. More bets are placed on general electionresults than on the Derby or the Grand National and if British blue laws make it well-nigh impossible to buy a loaf of bread on a Sunday. you'll find your local gambling casino open and bustling. Just last eek, in fact, the Bishop of Durham sent out a diocesan letter stating that gambling is a good thing:

"Our world is desperately looking for signs of hope," the bishop wrote. "Gambling may fulfill a need m this respect by giving those whose lives are very dull, and whose prospects are dim. something to dream about."

While most businesses are faltering, gambling booms. Coral Leisure Group, which in-cludes bookmaking, bingo parlors and four prestigious London casinos known collectively as the Curzon House Group, made a €5-million profit last year. Last summer on the Continent several casinos noted that business was off because gamblers felt they were being observed by taxmen, but no such thing happened in England. "I think that's sneaky," Bernard Coral managing director of the Curzon House Group says of the nosy taxmen. Typically French.

The Heyday

British gambling clubs went into a decline in the mid-19th century when it became impossible to prosecute a man for gambling debts; the heyday had come a century earlier when the bottom of a windowpene first to whether a man who fell suddenly in the street outside a club was dead or not (by the time the bets were in, be most definitely was). The last big blowout before Victorian morality set in was Crockford's, founded in 1827 by a high-rolling ex-fishmonger who opened posh premises on St. James's Street with stakes high enough to attract the Duke of Wellingtoo, Disraeli, and the impatient gaming Earl who gave the Sandwich its name. Crockford and his club ended in 1844. Crockford's re-opened as bridge club and has now emerged as the pride of the Curson House Group's boldings in a Nash house on Carlton House Terrace with Italianate-Victorian coffered ceilings (much praised in Monoure Conway's "Travels in Sooth Kensington," published in 1882) and a dining room by Sir Cecil Beaton. In these sedate precincts, members play French and American roulette, blackjack, kalooki (a kind of rummy), punto banco, studpoker, and, inevitably, backgammon. Financially, backgammon brings in nothing," says Bernard Coral.

"But the people who are interested produce an atmosphere, it creates Chemin de fer is no longer popular in England because the gaming laws restrict credit. It has been replaced by baccars and its American version, punto banco. The difference between French and American roulette is that in the American there are no rakes: chips are scooped up by hand and so the game is faster (though stakes tend to be higher at French roulette). Craps are also played, though in an oddly subdued way when no Americans are around:

"An all-English crowd is too inhibited," Mr. Coral says. "When there are no Americans around we play it in the staid English way. though the team try to shout and gee it along."

There is none of the hunatic intensity of Las Vegas or the breathtaking elegance and daring of sky's-the-limit Tout Va week at Deauville. Even if the law allowed, Mr. Coral wouldn't keep his tables open all night as Monte Carlo did last summer for the shelkhs—"We don't need to," he says simply. His casinos are year-round family affairs.

"Another basic difference in our approach is that this is a club, so there's a social aspect, while in the States, certainly in Las Vegas, it's completely impersonal. They're not interested in who's standing next to them, they just play until their eyes drop out."

Bernard Coral's father, Joe, was born in Russia, came to England at six and became a bookmaker at racetracks in 1926. In 1964, when the law allowed bookmakers to open betting shops (an event followed by someone opening the London School of Turf Accountancy), Joe Coral went public. His group now runs 650 betting shops and last summer at a race meeting at Cheltenham, Mrs. Joe Coral sat next to the Queen Mother.

Bernard Coral, a lean, tidy family man, started in bookmaking which he loved and describes as the most respectable of professions. You have to be honest. A good bookmaker requires integrity and being good at figures, a nimble mind and a sense for people. Knowing the people who are betting gives you an indication of how to shape

Mr. Coral says one can recognize each man's "gambling finger prints." Alan Watts, deputy managing director of the Curson House Group, who studied crouplership at Cannes, Baden-Baden and San Remo and music at Cambridge, agrees. "If you want to know a man's character, watch him gamble. The most interesting thing about the business is the people."

Both men agree that, thanks to the Gaming Board, British gambling is a model of honesty after some rough moments in the '60s when loopholes let in undestrable elements. Mr. Watts claims that British gambling is the most honest possible and, with profit margins for the house dictated by the Gaming Board, the most potentially. profitable for the gambler. Since Mr. Coral says all gamblers know they're going to lose, perhaps the advantage in Britain is that it can take longer.

The Gaming Board also has a killjoy side: It forbids casinos to advertise. live entertainment is banned and even drinks may not be served in the gaming rooms.

A Change

outfits his women croupiers wear-cream blouses with a fit-all-sizes wraperound skirt. He wistfully sees them in something low-cut with diamente straps, but doubts the Gaming Board will pass it, prefer suitable men. Both he and Mr. Watts admire the elegance of a trained French croupler:

man, says there's nothing more elegant than a French croupler handing out change on his palette.

was startled by the Las Vegas style roulette table.
